BRITISH SOCIETY FOR CLINICAL NEUROPHYSIOLOGY

(formerly The Electroencephalographic Society)

FOUNDED 1942

The British Society for Clinical Neurophysiology (BSCN) - formerly The EEG Society grew out of a group, meeting first in January 1942, "for an informal discussion among practising electroencephalographers on the technical and clinical aspects of electroencephalography". Quarterly meetings followed, and in 1943 the group became more formally organised as the Electroencephalographic Society with Professor E. D. Adrian, OM, FRS, as the first President. The Society was incorporated in April 1951. It was registered as a Charity in 1983. Following a vote of the Society's Members it changed its name to the British Society for Clinical Neurophysiology by a resolution passed in 1989.

The Society was established to promote and assist the science and practice of electroencephalography, clinical neurophysiology and allied subjects. It holds scientific meetings three times each year, usually in March or April, June and October, the last being also the occasion of the Annual General Meeting. It is customary for the October meeting to be held in London, the Spring and Summer meetings being held elsewhere in the United Kingdom.
